XMAS PROGRAMS CALLED OFF

PUBLIC MEETINGS BANNED DUE TO SCARLET FEVER

Due to the scarlet fever epidemic prevailing in Mokena, Santa Claus will not be able to visit the youngsters of the community on Christmas Eve as all the churches and the schools will remain closed while the scarlet fever quarantine is in effect.

In addition to the closing of the schools and churches all meetings of societies and organizations have been cancelled until further notice. The PTA Christmas party set for December 21st has been cancelled, also the community Christmas tree, visit of Santa Claus and the community singing of Christmas carols which was to have been held in the yard in the rear of the Sippel store in Mokena under the sponsorship of K. Sippel's Son Store and Cooper & Hostert garage.

In all, it is estimated there are about 26 cases of the disease. The quarantine is confined chiefly to children. No older people have come down with the fever and the business of the village is going on as usual and no rulings have been made preventing people from entering or leaving the village.

Dr. E. G. McMahon reports most of the cases are of a mild nature and no serious cases of illness are reported.

Rev. Theo. Haelele, pastor of St. John Evangelical church announces that all meetings and services of St. John Evangelical church have been cancelled. Services will be resumed on Sunday, December 26th if the health conditions of the community permit. This notice went into effect December 14. Christmas programs of the church will be given later.

Rev. Walter Geffert of the Immanuel Lutheran church and Rev. Chas. Knight of the Mokena M. E. church have issued similar announcements.

The first efforts at checking the epidemic were made last week when the Mokena public school was closed on Friday and fumigated on Saturday with hopes of reopening Monday, but the cases multiplied so rapidly that it was deemed best to keep the school closed until January 3rd. A day later the churches, civic and fraternal organizations decided it would be for the best interests of the community if no public gatherings of any kind would be held during the period of the quarantine.

Judge Sets Aside Heisner Will

A very interesting case came up before Probate Judge Austin of Will County Tuesday when the will of the late Paul Heisner of Frankfort was set aside by the judge following introduction of evidence by attorney A. H. Krusemark representing the contesting heirs. According to the story Mr. Heisner left a $19,000 estate to his nephew Fred Heisner and his wife. They had taken care of him during his illness.

The brothers of the deceased and the children of another deceased brother started proceedings to contest the will. The estate is represented by Hill & Herschbach who it is understood may file an appeal.

Tinley M. E. To Present "Dust of The Road"

"Dust of the Road", a play by Kenneth Sawyer, will be given as a dramatic reading Sunday morning by the Rev. Robert B. Pierce, at the First Methodist Church in Tinley Park. The play is based upon a German folk legend, the story of which is that every Christmas eve, Judas Iscariot, having repented for his betrayal of Christ, returns to earth and walks in human form, trying to do a little good for men to "balance his long account."

"Dust of the Road" tells of what happened to Peter and Prudence Steele when Judas paid a visit to them on the eve before our Lord's birthday.

Rev. Pierce received his speech training at the Northwestern University School of Speech and has had special dramatic training and experience besides.

The Christmas service at which "Dust of the Road" will be given, commences at eleven o'clock Sunday morning and runs for one hour. The public is cordially invited to attend.

SUNDAY SCHOOL PROGRAM

On Thursday evening, December 23, the Methodist Sunday School will present its annual Christmas program in the auditorium of the Tinley Park school. The program will consist of a children's cantata under the direction and supervision of Mr. Brown Campbell; a short children's play directed by Mrs. Jane Conley; and a little tot's program under the direction of Mrs. Lulu Rogers. In all the program will last about one hour and is open to the public.

2 Pages Xmas Ads.

For the first time in its history, the business men of Tinley Park have put on one of the most intensive Christmas advertising campaigns ever inaugurated here. In this issue appear two full pages of advertising of Tinley Park business men. This demonstrates the wonderful go-getter spirit of Tinley Park and also shows that the business men of that little city, offer merchandising values on a par with those of a large city. Read the many wonderful bargains listed in these Tinley Park ads., and patronize the advertisers.

ing two or three years or for some other party. One pen with each $1.50 paid on subscriptions. Parents having a number of children in school will find this plan an economical one to equip all of them with these necessary school articles.

Remember, this offer is good for a short time only. The last day is Friday December 24. Better come in soon.

Mokena Bank To Hold Meeting

The regular annual meeting of the stockholders of the Mokena State Bank will be held at the bank on Wednesday, January 12 between the hours of 10 a. m. and 12 o'clock noon for the election of directors for the ensuing year and for the transaction of such other business as may properly come before the meeting.

CORRECTION

An error was made in setting up Clarence Beagley's advertisement which appears on the back page of this issue. The Water Heaters are finished in White Dulux, the new baked on White Enamel that has the appearance of porcelain, but cannot chip, crack or peel.

Tinley To Quit Giving Coupons

The weekly awards which the Tinley Park Business Men have been giving every Saturday night for a number of years, will be discontinued on December 31st when the final award will be made. All holders of trade coupons will be given the privilege of redeeming them by that date. There will be three awards for the holidays as follows: Saturday, December 18th, Saturday, December 24th and Saturday, December 31st.

The last awards will be made at the Edward Henke Feed Store in Tinley Park. The final deadline for turning in outstanding coupons will be January 8, 1938.

These weekly prize awards have been quite popular and have been a good business builder.

The Tinley Park Business Men's Association is not going to lay low on the job, but to the contrary are preparing to launch many new activities for 1938. When the plans are in shape announcements of these activities will be made in this paper, so watch for more particulars later.

Slow Traveling On Icy Streets

The ice coated sidewalks and streets of the past several days have made walking and driving a real hazard. There have been many falls and numerous cars skidded into the ditch, but no serious cases of injury are reported.

Late Tuesday afternoon two big trucks skidded while attempting to climb the hill on 143rd street west of Orland Park and in skidding they blocked half of the highway so cars had to drive partly on the shoulder of the highway to get around the stalled trucks.

The state trucks got busy as soon as possible with cinders which were freely applied to hills and curves and thus greatly aided in preventing skidding.

Over 100 Children In Zion Xmas Cast

Big preparations have been going on for sometime at the Tinley Park Zion Lutheran church for the big Christmas program which will be held in the church on Christmas eve and in which 101 children are scheduled to take part. There will be the customary Christmas tree, music songs by choir, and Sunday School. There will be recitations, dialogs, etc. During the Christmas Eve service the customary offering for the Sunday school will be taken. At the end of the program the presentation of gifts will be made. Everyone invited.

Mokena Figures In Wild Cat Stories

Mokena received unfavorable publicity Wednesday when wild cat stories relative to the local scarlet fever epidemic appeared in the Chicago papers and was broadcast over the radio by the Herald-Examiner Globe Trotter, that Mokena was under quarantine and no one could enter or leave the village. These stories are untrue and when the attention of the parties making the errors was called to this fact, they agreed to correct same.

Business is not affected by the quarantine but the incorrect stories might hurt business, local business men feared. No new cases have been reported within the past few days, so it is believed that the epidemic has been successfully checked.

Frankfort To Have Community Christmas Tree

The Frankfort community will enjoy its third annual Community Christmas Tree and Christmas program Saturday night of this week, December 18 at 8 p. m. A 15 foot Christmas tree with 75 colored electric lights and fully decorated with tinsel and the usual glittering decorations will grace a spot in front of the village hall. The pastors of the community will lead in the devotional part of the exercises and the school children will take part with song and recitations. The Frankfort school band will furnish the musical part of the program. Santa Claus will also be there. This community Christmas celebration idea was first launched by Mayor Geo. Sangmeister and has proved so popular that it has become an annual event.

Frankfort Village Hall Condemned

For sometime the village board of Frankfort has known that the Frankfort village hall would sooner or later be condemned as unsanitary and this has happened when the local board of health condemned the hall as being unfit for public gatherings.

The village board is considering securing a PWA grant if possible or otherwise a bond issue would have to be floated. It is planned, however, to erect a structure which could not only be used to house the village hall, fire department and calaboose, but that could also accommodate a much needed local gym, community hall, etc. By charging a nominal rental for the use of the gym and hall, it is said enough money could be realized to make the hall self-sustaining and materially aid in the payment of its building cost. The village attorney Albert Krusemark is considering various angles of the matter and is expected to make his recommendations soon.

Night Prowler Turns In False Fire Alarm

The citizens of Mokena were rudely aroused from their nocturnal slumbers at 12:15 o'clock Monday morning when the fire siren started to wail several times. The local telephone office was quickly swamped with calls but no one knew where the fire was, not even Herman Schweser, the fire chief, nor the fire department. Foot prints were found around

HOME TALENT SHOW PLAYS TO PACKED HOUSE

The WLS Home Talent show sponsored by the Ladies Aid Society of the Tinley Park German M. E. church with a cast of 100 persons, played to packed houses in the Tinley Park public school auditorium last Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights. The stage was set in typical national barn dance setting of WLS in the Eighth Street theatre in Chicago with bales of hay, horse collars, lanterns, etc.

The old time square dances were stepped off in a spirited manner by Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Mafing Mr. and Mrs. Conrad Bormet, Alma Bormet, Bertha Siemsen, Jerry and Laurence Daugherty, Carl Vogt called.

All the barn dance favorites were cleverly impersonated and the shows went over 100 percent. Dr. Schultz and Edw. Hirsch served as masters of ceremonies. All those taking part carried out their parts to perfection.

At the close of the performance Saturday night, Miss May Melholland of WLS who had acted the show was called on for a few remarks, following which Mr. McMurray of the WLS booking staff, made a short talk in which he praised the cast and stated that Edna Lindquist of Evergreen Park, impersonating Patsy Montana and Ragner Anderson, Emil Helm, James McDougal and Edw. Hansen of Blue Island, who impersonated The Maple City Four, would be heard on the regular WLS barn dance program in the near future.

The sponsors of this successful show deeply appreciate the liberal support the public gave this undertaking.

If the suggestion of Mr. McMurray is acted upon, this kind of a show will be an annual affair in Tinley Park.

F Men Find Stalled Autoist Instead of Thieves

Last Saturday night the F men of Frankfort township were called out when a report was received that pigs were being stolen on the farm of Fred Yunker south of Mokena. Upon their arrival within a few minutes of the receipt of the call, the astonished F men found that a motorist having car trouble had his car parked in a lane and the noise of the motor aroused the pigs and they were squealing lustily. After explanations had been exchanged, all proceeded on their way home at 1:30 o'clock in the morning.

The quickness with which the F men responded to the call showed how well organized they are.

Frankfort In Line For New Fire Truck

Frankfort is in line for a new fire truck before very long. The committee appointed to look over various makes of trucks is ready to make its recommendation as to the style and type of apparatus to buy. Last Saturday Mayor George Sangmeister, Henry Lühring and Arthur Geuther made a trip to St. Louis to inspect a fire truck.

The siren box at the village hall. The prints led down to the next street corner so it is thought some mischief maker was the cause of the false alarm. Such jokes will mean a stiff fine if the perpetrator is found.

Play Safe For Christmas

During the next two weeks the streets will be crowded with Christmas shoppers; traffic will be congested. These conditions call for additional care on the part of both the pedestrian and the motorist. Pedestrians, intent on the serious question What shall I buy Mary? are very likely to dash across intersections heedless of traffic signals. Arms will be loaded with packages, obscuring the shoppers vision. Motorists will have to anticipate any emergency and be alert at all times.

Greetings

Christmas time is one of those rare occasions when our thoughts turn from the more material things of life to the nobler, more beautiful ones ...

—To our loved ones and our personal friends ...

—To our business friends and associates ...

—To the happiness we can bestow rather than that which is bestowed upon us.

We realize that were it not for the good will and friendly feeling of folks like you, we would not have been privileged to enjoy the happiness which has been ours this year. As an expression, therefore, of our genuine appreciation of your good will, we extend to you our most sincere good wishes for a

Homemakers' Exchange

of Helpful Household Hints and Recipes

Conducted by ELEANOR HOWE

Here is how one mother solved the problem of improving her young daughter's speech: She gave to the daughter an allowance of $1.00 a month and whenever "young daughter" made a grammatical error, which was discovered by some member of the household, she was fined one penny. At the end of the month, the fines were subtracted from her allowance.

Here is a miracle you can work with left-over canned or stewed fruit—making it into a delicious dessert. And here is the way to do it: Pour 3 cups left-over, canned or stewed fruit (undrained—one kind or an assortment) in a shallow baking dish. Then sift ¾ cup flour, ¾ cup sugar, 1 teaspoon baking powder and ½ teaspoon salt together in a bowl. Add 1 unbeaten egg and mix well. Then spread this dough mixture over fruit. Bake in a moderately hot oven (375°) approximately 30 minutes; or until brown. Serve warm with cream. In making this dessert, be sure your left-over fruit has not gone "flat." The best way is to keep it in a modern air-conditioned ice refrigerator.

For a novel kitchen shower, try this unusual suggestion. Have the guests arrive in a body, each wearing a cooking utensil in some unusual manner; and to each utensil have attached a recipe suited to its use. One person might wear a cake pan gaily decorated to resemble an Easter bonnet, another a necklace of kitchen gadgets, and so forth.

If you grease a casserole and its lid before putting food in it for baking, the casserole can easily be washed in hot, soapy water later without prolonged soaking.

Delicious home-made ice cream is very easily and quickly made in the modern ice cream freezers. And here are two helps for quick freezing: First, use 3 parts ice and 1 part salt—the best proportion for quick freezing. Second, do not use too much sugar in the recipe as it slows down the freezing.

To prevent cup cakes from sticking to the bottom of the baking tins, cut a number of wax paper rounds just big enough to fit the bottom of the individual cup cake pans. Put one of these in each cup before pouring in batter and when baked, cakes will come out without difficulty.

To melt a small quantity of butter, place it in the bowl of a soup ladle and hold over top burner flame. The handle is long enough to keep your hand well away from the flame.

A SAVORY SALMON LOAF in time for Lent! Drain liquid from one No. 2 can of salmon, remove bones and skin, and flake. Add 1 cup stale bread crumbs, ½ cup of chili sauce, 2 eggs, 2 tablespoons onion (cut fine) and ½ teaspoon salt. Mix well. Place in well greased loaf pan and bake in moderate oven (350°) for approximately 45 minutes. Unmold and garnish with lemon rings, pimiento strips and parsley. This salmon loaf can be stored, until ready to bake, in a modern air-conditioned ice refrigerator with no fear that the fish odor will be transmitted to other foods. The air-conditioning chamber of the new ice refrigerator provides circulating cold air which is constantly washed free of food odors. Savory Salmon Loaf is delicious served with a casserole of potatoes au gratin, or whipped potatoes on the half shell.

Icy Highway Cause of Serious Headon Crash

Early Tuesday evening Oak Park Avenue north of Tinley Park was the scene of four cars being ditched due to the icy pavement. One car skidded and landed in the ditch. A short time later another car skidded and landed on the already ditched car.

The only serious accident occurred when a Chevrolet car being driven by a resident of the Elmore South Subdivision skidded, the driver lost control of the car which crashed head on into a passing car. Several persons were slightly hurt. The cars were damaged. English Bros., of Tinley towed in the ditched and the wrecked cars.

SYNOPSIS

Joyce Sewell, on the eve of her twentieth birthday, rebels at her lot, dependent on her detested stepmother, Irma, and full of tragic memories of her mother's murder twelve years before and her father's death six months ago. Irma calls in Helm Blackadder, an admirer, to help her persuade Joyce to marry rich, young Michael Kirkpatrick. Mike, sent up to Joyce by Irma and Blackadder, demands a showdown on his proposal and is rejected. Reading her father's papers, Joyce realizes that La Barranca, a Mexican hacienda which her father had owned, legally belongs to her. Later, she receives a letter enclosing a warrant on the United States Treasury for $10,000 compensation for her mother's murder at La Barranca. She confers with Mr. Bradley, a banker and only remaining friend of her father's. She confides that she wants to make a secret journey to Mexico. Bradley arranges all details for her. She departs by plane undetected. Dirk Van Suttart, second secretary of the American embassy in Mexico City, gives Joyce a chilly reception and she loses her temper. She finds a Mexican woman lawyer, Margarida Fonseca, who takes her to General Onelia, right-hand man to the Mexican minister of war. Margarida reminds Onelia that the usurper of La Barranca is his dangerous enemy, General Dorado. The two make plans to send Joyce with a few picked men under Pancho Buenaventura to drive Dorado out. Adan Arnaldo, a young man who runs El Tenebroso, a night club, knows Dorado's present whereabouts, so they take Joyce there that night, where she notices Dirk. General Dorado arrives.

Arnaldo's strong hands darted out to seize the barrel of the gun and hold it pointed upward. The last of the lights were extinguished and with darkness came uproar. Five shots rang out in a steady spurt, tables were overturned, dishes crashed, women screamed, men groaned and grunted. Joyce sat quite still, pressing back as if to push herself through the wall. Soon she reached out her right hand tentatively; General Onelia was gone. She pushed her left along the seat. It was empty—Margarida was gone.

At that instant a fumbling hand found her shoulder, shot down along her arm and seized her wrist. She felt herself being hauled along the wall by someone who seemed sure of his way. Who was it and why? Was it Onelia, Van Suttart or—Dorado? What did it matter if only she could get out? Something struck her in the face, enveloping her head. For a moment she thought she would suffocate, then realized it had been merely a plunge through heavy curtains. The next thing she knew she was dragging the sharp sweet air of the night into her lungs as her escort half lifted, half hurled her into the tonneau of a waiting car.

The chauffeur started so suddenly her head was thrown against the back of the seat. Then the cold cut into her; she shivered from head to toe and her teeth began to chatter with a steady rattle. Promptly the man took her in his arms, snatched the rug from its bracket and drew it over them both. She tried to calm herself—she must calm herself or she couldn't think. What did he intend? Where was he taking her? Then he did something which steadied her nerves at once; he tried to light a cigarette without disturbing her. At the flash of the match she looked up into Adan Arnaldo's pensive face.

A great many thoughts struck Joyce all at once, making her dizzy. She had escaped the scene of pandemonium to fall into what?

"If you'll put me in a taxi," she said, drawing away from him, "I'll be all right. Then you can go back."

"To help the scrubwomen?" asked Arnaldo. "There wasn't anything unusual about our closing tonight. I've seen eight people shot and killed in the last two years."

"Oh!" gasped Joyce.

"That's why I was wondering," he stated.

"About what?" she asked.

"You—a girl like you! I don't get it yet. Coming into a dump like that between two buzzards. What did they want?"

She decided at once to put Arnaldo off and in the same flash wondered if she dared try to draw him.

"How should I know?" she replied, almost without a pause. "I never saw either of them before today."

"You're not lying?"

"I came to Mexico only yesterday," said Joyce. "It's the truth. I wanted to see what was going on so I got Margarida Fonseca to take me."

"How did you come to go to her? Has she had herself listed as a guide?"

"No," said Joyce. "She's my lawyer."

"You've got me guessing," he declared. "When I saw you with those two zopilotes I had a feeling you'd need help pretty soon and need it bad, but you don't seem to think so and I'm beginning to change my mind. Every man living has to be fooled by a woman ever so often and perhaps this is my night. Perhaps I'm a bonehead, blind in both eyes, and you're a bad egg."

"I'm not," said Joyce simply; "I'm exactly what you thought. Please take me home."

"Where?" She told him. He hesitated for a moment, then called out the address to the driver. The car slowed, swung around the next circle and started back in the opposite direction.

"All right. I'll believe you. Since you say you're what I thought you were I'll take you straight to your hotel on one condition."

"What is it?"

"That you never come into my place again."

"Don't worry!" said Joyce fervently. "I wouldn't anyway. I've never been so frightened before, and it wasn't the row that did it."

"No?" said Arnaldo curiously. "If that rumpus didn't scare you, what did?"

"A face. It was horrible. I'll never forget it."

"What face?"

"That man in uniform—the one who started the trouble."

"Dorado," said Arnaldo slowly. "Pepe Dorado. So that's it. What do you want to know about Dorado?"

"Only—that I'll never see him again."

"You won't; nobody will for a long while," said Arnaldo grimly.

"Why?" asked Joyce quickly. "Did something happen to him?"

"Not yet, but I promise you it's going to. I give him until daylight. I won't see him out of town in person but I have a couple of partners nobody knows about who will. When they tell him to beat it he'll go and stay gone."

As the car drew up in the light from the hotel entrance she laid her hand on his arm and looked straight into his eyes. "Why have you been so good to me? Why?"

He shrugged his shoulders. "A lot of us Mexicans play at hating

Pancho Buenaventura, in Uniform, Stepped Out to Help With the Luggage.

the United States, but not me. They were good to me up there, a lot better than I've been to you. We're different. It's like two worlds. There's one way to live in your country and another to live in mine, but let me give you a tip. It takes a strong head to stand mixed drinks. I have a strong head."

"So have I," said Joyce.

He studied her thoughtfully. "Either you're right about your head or you're a fool."

"Why?"

"Think it out for yourself. You don't know danger when you see it. You start out with the boner of coming to Mexico. You tie in with a couple of gringo-haters who wouldn't leave a lamb his bleat. You butt into El Tenebroso and when you're out riding with a buzz-saw you think you're playing with a paper pin-wheel. To top the list you decide to mix it with what—with whom? Pepe Dorado! No; there's only one way to make everything fit—you're a fool and I'm another."

"Perhaps I am," said Joyce soberly, "but I hope not." She pushed down the rug, stepped to the curb and gave him her hand. "I'll never forget you or what you've done; please don't forget me."

"I won't!" he assured her. "Get along in before you freeze."

At ten o'clock at night of the third day Joyce and her baggage were transferred by taxi to the railway station and then as a further precaution by another hired conveyance to Margarida's apartment.

Onelia was there. He glanced at his watch and spoke in a tender voice which seemed to drip with regret at parting.

"It is time, my child. I shall stay here. Go down by yourself and slip into my car. The chauffeur already has your bags and I've given him the necessary instructions. Don't worry if he drives fast; it's only to make sure nobody can follow."

Joyce hesitated whether to kiss Margarida, chilled by the peculiar look in her eyes. Too impatient to puzzle it out for what it was—a look of eternal farewell—she compromised by touching cheeks in the Latin manner, one cheek and then the other. That done she hurried down two flights of stairs to the street and within five minutes was being driven at vertiginous speed along the Paseo de la Reforma, through the umbrageous Bosque de Chapultepec, around Dolores cemetery and into a blind lane. There, blotted out against a clump of bushes, stood a dilapidated touring car with its tattered curtains in place. Sergeant Pancho Buenaventura, in uniform, stepped out to help with the luggage and motioned to her to get into the tonneau, but she knew better. Resigning that space to her bags she climbed into the front seat beside him. A moment later they were off and presently swung left into the Toluca road.

CHAPTER V

Back in Elsinboro Mrs. Sewell was pacing distractedly up and down her living room awaiting the arrival of Helm Blackadder. Why had he shouted at her over the telephone? Why had he said such things? It was she who had grounds for anger, she who had a right to feel hurt. Was it her fault he had been away—gone to New York without saying a word? Her soft brown eyes watered and then blazed. Everything she had done had been right; she had sacrificed herself to the limit, but she had done what was right. Abruptly Blackadder appeared before her, not having bothered to ring or knock. She hurled herself into his arms.

"Helm! Oh, Helm!" she sobbed. It was one of the cleverest moves of her entire career. Perforce he held her, patting her back, and the harder she clung to him the less could he find it in his heart to pour out the scathing words which a moment ago had been trembling on the tip of his tongue.

"Irma, how on earth could you stir up such a mess for yourself? Why didn't you find out where I was and call me up? Why couldn't you wait till I came back?"

She threw herself into a chair and covered her eyes. "Please don't, Helm. Please listen to me first. That child—that poor child! When she didn't come back after the week-end I telephoned Frances Holder and found she hadn't been there at all! Then I tried to telephone you; I did, Helm. I notified the police; then I thought of the radio."

"I'll say you did!" groaned Blackadder. "Hasn't it occurred to you Joyce isn't lost at all? That nobody kidnaped her? That nothing has happened to her except what she intended to have happen?"

"No, it hasn't. Do you remember what she said to us? Do you? Well, I do; the words are burned into my brain. This is what she said: 'You want to be rid of me—both of you. All right. I promise. If it isn't that way it will be another.'"

"Bunk," said Blackadder. "That girl? Never. How much money do you think she had?"

"Hardly any."

Blackadder frowned. He went to the telephone and called up the station master. "Jim, this is Helm Blackadder. Did Joyce Sewell leave Elsinboro on a train?" Promptly came the answer: "No, Helm, she didn't. Naturally as soon as I seen about the reward I wasn't satisfied with only checking up around here. I telephoned every crew from Buffalo to New York. You can take it from me she didn't get away on no train."

"Thanks, Jim," said Blackadder. He hung up and faced around to ward Irma. "So there's a reward now, is there? How much?"

"Five thousand dollars."

"Holy pickerel!"

Blackadder started pacing the floor. Suddenly he halted. His brow cleared as if by magic and he made a leap for the telephone.

"Airport!" he shouted. "Get me the airport!" A moment later he was talking again. "Airport? I don't know you and you don't know me, but this is Helm Blackadder. Get it? Helm Blackadder. Have you reported to the police what day, what hour and where you took your last woman passenger?"

"No. Why should we?"

"You know why. You see the papers, don't you?"

"Sure, we read 'em—and me and the pilot both—and that's why."

"I see," said Blackadder softly. "Now listen, you. I'm Miss Joyce Sewell's guardian. Quit worrying about that reward, if it's ever paid to anybody, which it won't be, I'll guarantee you'll get your share. You and your buddy don't want to be put behind bars for compounding a felony, do you?"

"Aw, say now, Mister, we ain't done nothing."

"You're right you haven't and you'll find there are cases where you can get in as bad for doing nothing as for pulling the trigger. They call it abetting, meaning to incite, to encourage."

"What do you want to know?"

"When did she leave?"

"A week ago today at four o'clock."

"Where to?"

"We carried her to Newark."

"How much did she pay for her ticket?"

"How do I know? She didn't buy no tickets from us."

"Who did?"

"Nobody. She had her tickets with her."

"Did anybody meet her at Newark?"

"No."

"Have you any idea where she went from there?"

"Sure. She was a through passenger and would just have time to catch the plane south."

"Through? Through to where? Miami?"

"No. Balbuena."

"Where's that?"

"It's the airport for Mexico City, Mister, and much good may it do you to know it."

Blackadder turned to Irma. "Did you get it? Joyce is in Mexico City. She's been there for about four days."

"Mexico City!" gasped Irma. "Why, how can she be? You can't travel to Mexico City on five dollars. I know because—"

"That's what's got me stumped," interrupted Blackadder.

He proceeded to call up the heads of the three banks in town, leaving Mr. Bradley, known to have been Cutler Sewell's good friend, to the last. The first two made no bones about answering since their information happened to be negative; they had paid out no money as a loan or otherwise to Joyce Sewell. But when it came to the president of the City National, the reply was decidedly evasive.

"Let me get this straight, Helm," said Mr. Bradley's aggravatingly calm voice. "Have you taken out papers as Miss Joyce Sewell's guardian?"

"No," said Blackadder, controlling his temper with difficulty, "but her stepmother is sitting here beside me. Do you want me to put her on the phone—have her tell you you can say it to me and say it all?"

"No; I'll take your word for it. Now just what is it you want to know, Helm?"

Niftiness for New Year's

LIKE to give yourself a lift for the New Year, Milady? Then spruce up with Sew-Your-Own—the easy way to chic. Here, for instance, are three swell swing models that will make you modern as tomorrow and put you in the running for the title, "best dressed woman." Right now it's parties you're thinking of, so pick a pair of eligibles from today's trio and you'll be groomed to hobnob with the smart young set.

Will You Dance?

The New Year's Party will be festive and so will you in the model at the left in black moire. This is a very young frock and not a little flattering to the debonair figure. It has a skirt that's built for dancing, and the oh, so slender waist is no drawback (take it from one who knows). Be sure, young lady, to have your version ready to go when the invitation to celebrate comes flashing over the wire.

Spic 'n' Classic.

There's always a "morning after," and that's when you'll be glad to have a spic and classic frock like the one above, center. It is suitable to take back to school to rouse the roommate's envy and, pleasantly enough, it's so easy to cut and stitch, a freshman can't go wrong. Make one version in flat crepe and a carbon copy in sheer wool—it is superb both ways.

Ah, My Friends.

How about a two-piece of lame and velvet for that rousing family reunion over the holidays? The model above, right, is two pieces, but it's one with chic and figure flattery. You'll have your aunts making ohs and ahs and the bright young cousins calling you "the duchess"! What's more you'll look the part.

Pattern 1330 is designed for sizes 12 to 20 (30 to 40 bust). Size 14 requires 4½ yards of 39-inch material plus 6 yards of gros-

Balkans Unable to End Old Custom of Vendetta and "Eye for Eye" Rule Holds

Vendetta continues to be practiced in the Balkan mountains despite severest measures taken by the various governments there to suppress this centuries-old custom, writes a Vienna United Press correspondent.

"Eye for eye, and tooth for tooth" is the supreme law among the mountaineers, who extend it not only to the second and third generations of the killer but also to his remote relatives and to his entire village.

Intervention by authorities counts for nothing in those regions. The thirst for revenge remains unquenched, even if the murderer has been executed under normal legal procedure in the meantime; it is considered a sacred rule that a kinsman of the slain must kill the slayer, or, if this man cannot be reached, because he has died a natural death or for some other reason, one of the latter's kin must be slain.

The only alternative is "bessa," a sort of "God's truce." It is seldom practiced because, aside from humiliating ceremonies on the part of the slayer's kin, it involves the payment of 50 gold pieces of "blood money," an enormous sum among the peasants and shepherds.

If, through friendly mediation by a third village, "bessa" has been agreed upon, an appointment is made between the warring parties to meet in a spot midway between the villages.

Unarmed and carrying a noose around his neck, the chief of the slayer's family enters the other party's camp, where he is met by the head of the rival tribe with the following formula:

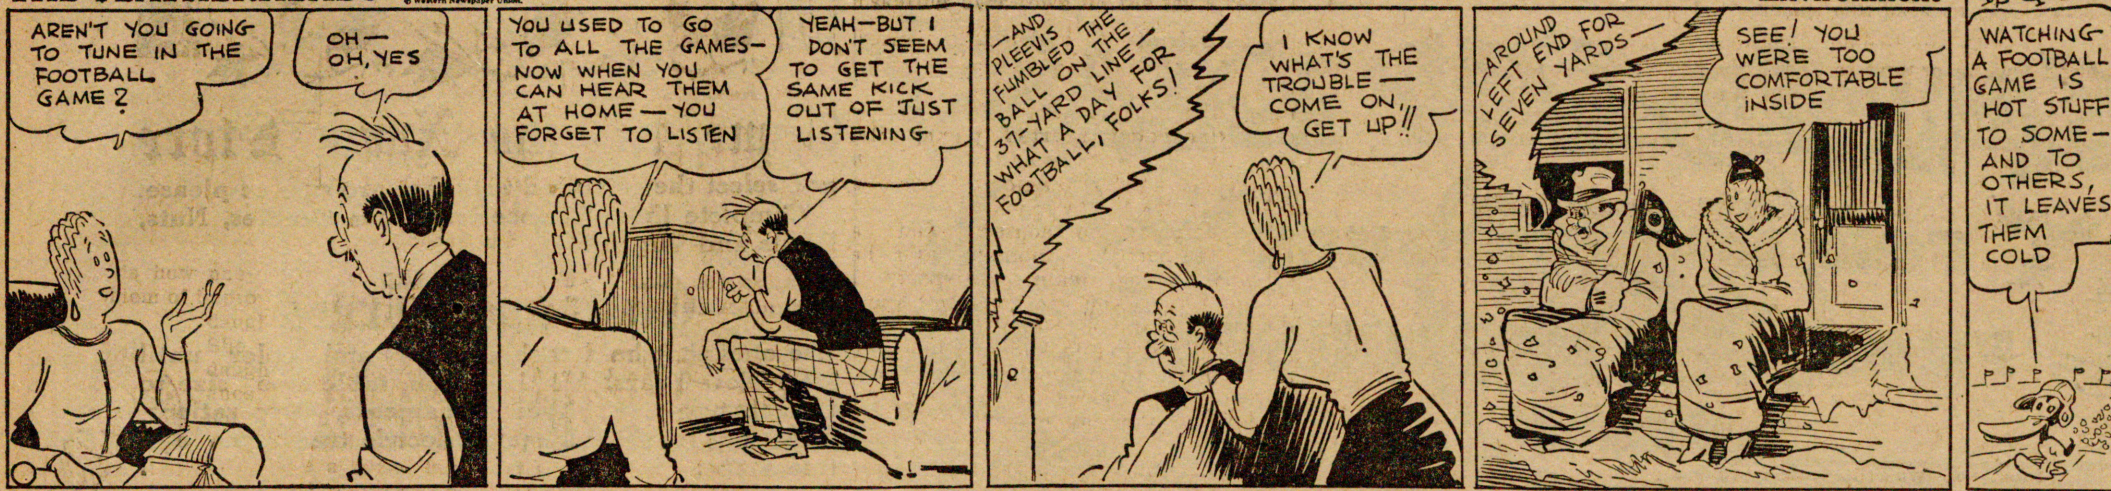

"Thou werest our enemy, thy kin were our enemies, thy village with all its houses, with all its herds and fields and with all that lives and thrives there, were our enemies."

Sentinels of Health

Don't Neglect Them!

Nature designed the kidneys to do a marvelous job. Their task is to keep the flowing blood stream free of an excess of toxic impurities. The act of living—life itself—is constantly producing waste matter the kidneys must remove from the blood if good health is to endure. When the kidneys fail to function as Nature intended, there is retention of waste that may cause body-wide distress. One may suffer nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feel tired, nervous, all worn out. Frequent, scanty or burning passages may be further evidence of kidney or bladder disturbance. The recognized and proper treatment is a diuretic medicine to help the kidneys get rid of excess poisonous body waste. Use Doan's Pills. They have had more than forty years of public approval. Are endorsed the country over. Insist on Doan's. Sold at all drug stores.

ORLAND PARK

The Orland Park postoffice will be open until 6 p. m., from December 21st to 23rd inclusive. Parcel Post will leave same day.

Quite a number of Orland people attended the WLS home talent show at the Tinley Park school last Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights.

John Helenhouse, has improved so well from injuries sustained in an auto accident, that he was able to resume his barber work last week. His many friends are glad to see him back on the job again.

While Barney Moore was skating last Wednesday he fell and dislocated his right shoulder.

Floyd Cooper underwent an appendicitis operation in the Silver Cross hospital, Joliet last Saturday. He is convalescing nicely.

Clarence Beagley is engaged in wiring the new Schoep home in Mokena for electricity.

The new 1938 automobile license stickers have been received by the village and are now on sale.

The Orland Park Legion Post dance held at Goodings Grove last Saturday night was well attended. The Post is now busily engaged, preparing for a New Year eve party at Goodings Grove hall.

The card and bunco party sponsored by the St. Michaels Parish, Sunday afternoon was very well attended. Cake and coffee was served by the committee who made it a profitable and enjoyable afternoon.

SCHOOL NEWS

The Orland school will present a program on Wednesday night, December 22 for the Parent Teachers Association. The Primary room will give a play entitled "The Lazy Eli". Every child in the first four grades takes part in this. The Grammar room will render a play called "The Coming of Santa Claus". The high school girls will sing two Christmas songs, O, Little Town of Bethlehem, and Christmas Carol. Marie Heiting will give a reading, "A Fur Coat for Christmas".

All of the rooms are decorated to help make the Christmas spirit prevalent. The Primary room has a border decoration of old English houses and lamp posts; The Grammar room a border of the Sheperds following the star, and the high school room a border of pointsettias and candles. All of these were made by the pupils. The grade children made wreaths of evergreen to hang in the windows.

The high school girls are making Christmas gifts. They are enamelling salt and pepper sets, clothes hangers and other wooden articles.

School closes for the holidays, on Wednesday, December 22 and reopens on Monday, January 3, 1938.

FRANKFORT

Mrs. Herbert Kohlhaugen

Miss Edith Wischover entertained the Bachelor Button club on December 7. Two new members, namely: Miss Lola Scheer and Ruth Neiland joined the club. The next meeting will take place on December 21 when Miss Tillie Wischover will be the hostess. This will be their Christmas party and an exchange of gifts will be an added feature.

On Saturday December 11, Annette Kohlhaugen was surprised by a group of her friends, it being her 15th birthday. The evening was spent in contests and the game Pick Up Sticks was played. Betty Vollrath and John Henry Weitendorf had high scores while Jeanette Heisner and Vernon Bobzin had low. A luncheon was served in the Christmas idea by her mother. The honored guest received many beautiful gifts. Those present were: Betty Vollrath, Lucille Topp, Virginia Warning, Corinne Krusemark, Katherine Priami, Jeanette Heisner, Georgia Mitchell, Wilma Kampe, Irene Steinhagen, Grant Geuther, Warren Heisner, Robert Elsner, John Henry Weitendorf, James Raffauf and Vernon Bobzin.

A number of local people attended the Girl's Annual Interclass meet held at the Joliet Township High School on Dec. 10. The program consisted of the Junior College Athletic Association followed by Class activities of freshmen, sophomores, juniors and seniors. Class relays were also held. This sort of program was held each year since 1931. The object is to show the work that is accomplished in the physical education of the gymnasium classes. It aims to show that "in vigorous, free activity, the modern girl finds health, strength, recreation and joy. The entire program was enjoyed by all.

A very few young folks attended the rally held at the Peotone Evangelical church on Sunday, Dec. 12. Those who were there enjoyed the service and their only regret was that more did not show an interest by attending.

The community has provided the skaters a pond so all may enjoy the out-door sport. Mrs. Katrine Lankeau's lot was flooded and serves for the youth a good place for recreation.

Mr. and Mrs. Immanuel Engleman are the proud parents of a newly born son. The mother and son are in the Blue Island hospital.

A daughter was born to Mr. and Mrs. Lester Heisner on Wednesday. Mrs. Heisner will be remembered as Arlene Mager. She is in St. James hospital at Chicago Heights.

Mrs. Lizzie Kloss visited for a few days in the home of her sister, Mrs. Bertha Sangemeister.

Mr. Herman Weichbrodt Sr. who was enjoying a vacation in St. Petersburg, Fla. had to shorten his trip because he received word that his brother had died.

Mrs. Minnie Bruggemann is taking care of Mrs. Chas. Bobzin who is still ill in her home.

Friends and neighbors surprised Mr. Christ Sangemeister on his 50th birthday on December 9. A very pleasant evening was enjoyed by all.

LINCOLN ESTATES

Mrs. R. Fisher.

Gertrude and Lillian Heath both are home from school because of illness.

Mr. and Mrs. Joe Stepanek of Chicago were visitors at the Edw. Hermanek home Monday.

Willard Eberhard visited with his aunt in Gary, Ind., over the weekend. Dr. and Mrs. Robt. Weir visited in Chicago Saturday.

Walter Nejdringhaus visited with his cousin Wilfred over the weekend

MOKENA

A son was born to Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Tyler, December 13 at St. Anthony's hospital, Chicago. Mother and son doing nicely. Mrs. Tyler will be remembered as the former Miss Dorothy Kraus.

Ona E. McGovney returned last week from a trip to Florida.

Miss Koors, teacher in Mokena high school has gone to her home in Bloomington, Ill., for the holidays and until school reopens in January.

The Royal Neighbors of Mokena had their regular meeting Tuesday evening with a very good attendance.

We held election of officers and were nearly all reelected. After the meeting cards and bunco were played. While the committee was getting a lovely luncheon ready, gifts were exchanged from beneath a lighted Christmas tree which looked very pretty and made things look so festive. Thanks to our hostess Mrs. Groth. Everyone had a good time.

We are hoping our members will be out in the coming year and attend regularly so we can do things, like our big Camps do. So make good resolutions and come regularly in the future. We wish you all a Merry Christmas and Happy New Year.

Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Mueller and Mr. Chas. Smith left Saturday by motor for Florida. The Muellers the future. We wish you all a Merry will remain for the winter.

MARLEY

MISS FRANCIS GILLETTE

The Marley Woman's club have just completed another community project. For a number of years certain members of the club have had the idea of a Christmas tree growing on the church lawn. At the November meeting of the club, a committee composed of Mrs. G. W. Bush and Mrs. Mervin Moore was appointed to purchase a tree and plant it after of course, getting permission from the church trustees. The arrangements were satisfactorily made and with the help of some man power the dream has materialized. On Monday morning, December 13, the job was finished and a beautiful spruce now stands a few feet north of the front window of the church building. The afore mentioned man power was supplied by Mr. Willard Bush and Mr. Jesse Marshall to whom the club tenders a vote of thanks.

With the tree placed, next comes the question of suitable holiday decorations. This was solved thru contributions from Earle Cutler, James Frazer and John Cutler and so on Christmas Eve our Marley community tree will burst forth in a blaze of lights and will send out its message of lights and cheer every night during Holiday week.

Mr. and Mrs. William Crosshorn celebrated their 25th wedding anniversary at their home on Saturday December 11. Many availed themselves of the opportunity of calling on them and extending congratulations. Guests came from Mokena, Frankfort, Plainfield, Aurora, Joliet and Chicago. Mr. and Mrs. Crosshorn were assisted in receiving by Mrs. Crosshorn's father, Mr. Beechman. Eight guests were present who were present at the wedding 25 years ago. Mrs. Crosshorn was attired in her wedding gown which was white satin trimmed with lace, floor length and with a corsage of white and pink sweet peas. Mr. Crosshorn also wore the same suit which he wore at the wedding. Refreshments were served from the dining table which was tastefully decorated with white chrysanthemums and silver tapers in glass candle sticks. Altho the invitations read "no gifts", many were received as well as many lovely cards. Marilyn Bush had charge of the guest book. Mrs. Oscar Paar, Mrs. Clarence Mast, Mrs. Howard Ramsay and Mrs. W. Bush assisted in the dining room and Marjory Mapes and Clara Bush serving.

On Sunday members of the Crosshorn's family met with them and enjoyed a pot luck dinner. Twenty-one were present from Oswego, Yorkville and Aurora.

Word has been received from Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Cleveland of Warren, Minn. of the arrival of a daughter, born December 9. Mr. Cleveland is the youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Cleveland.

The pupils of the Lauffer school, under the direction of Miss Lenore Blume will give their Christmas program on Thursday evening, December 23.

On Wednesday afternoon, December 22 Mrs. Mark Carkhuff and her pupils will present a Christmas program at the school. Everyone is invited.

Choir practice will be held at the church Saturday evening.

A New Year's Eve party sponsored by the Sunday Evening club will be held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Sprout.

The Sunday Evening club is sponsoring a Christmas party and program next Sunday evening. This meeting is in charge of Helen and Jeanie Frazer. There will be a gift exchange. Everyone bring a gift and names will be exchanged after the meeting.

The Christmas program of the Marley church will be in charge of the various classes of the Sunday school. Each class has been made responsible for a part of the program. Mrs. Ward Bush will be in charge of the devotional part of the evening during which time the manger scene will be enacted, a play "The True Spirit of Christmas" will be presented by the children of Iva Sproats class with the help of some other classes. Under the direction of Mr. Snodgrass a play, "The Last Christmas" will be given by the girls of that class. A final rehearsal will be given at the church

Wednesday evening, Dec. 22.
The interior of the Marley church is being redecorated.

What's Doing In Washington

When a measure comes before Congress there are two fundamental questions which each Member should ask himself before casting his vote. 1. Is the plan proposed by the bill practicable and wise? Or to phrase the same question another way What will be the long-time economic and social effects of the proposal and are those effects really desirable? 2. Does Congress have the power under the Constitution to put the proposed plan into operation? Or to rephrase that question: Will the law stand the tests in the Courts as those tests have been enunciated by the Supreme Court in its previous decisions?

One question is as important as the other. Unless both can be answered in the affirmative the measure should not be placed on the statute books. But there is a third question which the average Member of Congress asks himself which produces unfortunate results: What effect will a "Yea" or "Nay" vote on the pending bill have on my chances for reelection?

With their usefulness being dependent upon the will of the electorate, it is natural that Members of Congress should ask that question when passing judgement on every major bill. There is no particular harm in asking. Nor, perhaps, is it particularly undesirable that Members allow the answer to be a factor in their decision. But it is when the answer to that question and only that, is allowed to control the decision that the unfortunate results accrue. It is when possible political consequences of some one vote are allowed to outweigh all else that the harm is done.

During the past week the debates on the Floor of the House and Senate on the respective farm bills have been centered around the two important questions as to the likely economic-social results and as to the constitutionality of the respective measures. Discussions as to the possible political consequences of a negative or affirmative vote have been for the most part confined to the cloak rooms and lobbies, where there is no stenographer taking shorthand notes on all that is said for publication in the Congressional record. But it is within the power of Congress to enact the proposed law, as well as with its economic-social effects, that the people are most concerned, as are the less political-minded Members of Congress who sincerely try to find a permanent solution.

Considerable attention is being given particularly in the Senate as to the constitutionality of the pending bills. The bitter experience with a number of invalid laws is recalled especially with the AAA and the Cotton control Act. To enact unconstitutional legislation, as that experience has shown, only serves to intensify the very difficulties it is designed to solve.

Senator Wm. E. Borah (R) of Idaho and Senator Wm. E. King, (D) of Utah brought the constitutional question to the front when each declared that the Senate Farm bill could not stand the test. More than ordinary attention has been given their speeches, as both are recognized as outstanding scholars in constitutional law. Both are members of the Senate Judiciary Committee, and each belongs to a different political party. Moreover, Senator Borah represents a distinctly agricultural state and has long evidenced a deep interest in the farm problem.

Whether we agree or disagree with Senators Borah and King, their comments are indeed worthy of consideration if for no other reason than to correct the inadequacies of the pending legislation. What would it avail the farmer the Congress and the people to enact a farm bill which is more or less certain to be declared unconstitutional? As Senator King stated in his speech, "I would feel that I was doing a disservice to my country if I voted for a measure which I believed to be unconstitutional because of some advantage or some supposed expediency."

It is interesting to note that in the Minority Report of the House Committee on Agriculture the charge is made that there are "certain proponents of this type of compulsory legislation who are very anxious to have enacted into law legislation which is obviously unconstitutional, and which will be so declared by the highest court in order to provide new life for a continued attack upon the Supreme Court." As to whether the charge is true, I do not know but certainly care should be exercised lest our farmers should be made the instrument of political expediency. The real friends of the farmers will insist upon an agricultural program which will stand all the tests, constitutional economic and social, in order that there may be permanent prosperity for the people who provide the sustenance of the nation. Unless those who provide the bread prosper, no one can prosper.

Heart Disease Victims

In proportion to population, heart disease is found more often in males than in females, in Jews than in Gentiles, in white persons than in negroes and in business and professional classes than in laborers, says Collier's Weekly.

Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Johnson of Joliet entertained the latter's parents Mr. and Mrs. Roy Myers at dinner Sunday.

Palos Park

Hi Folks:

As I was thumbing my way thru the big city of Palos a large group of people walked by talking about their neighbors, I caught part of the conversation and here it is:

According to several people the orchestra for the PTA dance was well liked. Congratulations fellows. Ethyl and Gus Johnson one of those fast numbers and they really did some fancy kicking. * * * Palos Juniors, girls organization will have a meeting and Christmas party in the home of Marge Juneman, 119th st. and 85th ave., on Friday evening at which gifts will be exchanged.

Annetta Holthof has been invited to act as visiting lady and Helen Watkins will be voted on as a member. The club now has 16 members. * * * The girls have received their membership pins and any girl being voted into the club will receive a pin as part of her initiation.

Is it true that Vivienne Harris is a red-headed bomb-shell in the sewing class, and the only one that can tame her down is Bernice Grossman? Tis blown about that Betty Rickert is a twin to Mae West and she attracts the gentlemen like dogs do cats. * * * Ettie Tatge claims she intends to take a good rest during her Christmas vacation, evidently the school work has gotten her down. * * *

A certain person would like to know the boy that kept breaking the balloons at the PTA dance. * * * Louise Kuipers should be given an honorable mention, she walks from Worth to Palos everyday, rain or shine.

The Grocery man's son, Meets a lot of pals. He has a lot of fun waiting on all the gals. * * * P. S. He is to be found in the store in Orland where the wise shopper receives a green bag.

With a lot of shivers and a loud chattering of teeth, I chanced upon Charlene Tamlyn, in the gym, glancing at an open window. That is all right Charlene I know how cold gym suits and tennis shoes can be in winter. * * * I bet you never saw anyone filing their finger nails on a brick building or cleaning their teeth with a peering knife. Wonder how big the cavity really was? * * * Palos Park is a quiet place now, since no one is permitted to shoot in the village.  Say Dorothy when do I get that auto. mobile ride you promised me last June? * * * We hear that one certain Norman is demanding a lot of H. S. time, right H. or have you another one by now? * * * Also W. M seems to be sweet on a certain R. M no hard feelings now W. its all in fun.

Where was we when we saw a certain car parked on the curb and no one else but our own little H. F. in it with E. K. Oh yes we all saw you that night, and who is it that goes around in a daze just because a sweet little girl smiled at him the other night, of course it wouldn't do any good to ask Pearl, she wouldn't know. And little sisters aren't supposed to tell. * * * What about H. S I guess we can bid her fond adieu, she says shes leaving for all points south. Wonder who He can be?

Gee I bet C. E. has a nice long trip every time he goes to see his one and only. Don't blush B. we've seen you walking the floor wondering where he was. * * * Now that M. K. is going back to school why G. K. has to limit his dates to Sun. nites, poor G. I guess I'd better sign off now, but I'm warning you gals look out that no one sees you or I'll get to hear it sure. T. G.

For Girls only. We know the boys will read this so I will tell them why their dates are never accepted. 1. They have no dough. 2. They are a pain in the neck. 3. Always broke. 4. Pain in the neck. 5. Empty pocket. 6. Pain in the neck. I think they can benefit by two of these hints don't you? The Scribbler.

By the way do you folks remember when the initiation committee gave Christine Hellig a turnip a turnip to get signatures on and the turnip dried up? Well, then they gave her an egg to get signed. The egg accidentally got broken and much to her surprise, there was a chicken in that egg.

Armistice Day—1937

By RAYMOND PITCAIRN

National Chairman
Sentinels of the Republic

"You are in some special sense the soldiers of freedom."

That was the message delivered by the people of America, through their Chief Executive, to the youths who made up our National Army two decades ago.

That is still the thought of America when on Armistice Day it accords to the Unknown Soldier at Arlington honors higher than are paid to any famous Captain.

On that anniversary of peace, Americans recall the ideals to which we once subscribed so wholeheartedly.

On that anniversary, we recall the sacrifices made in the cause of human freedom; in the conviction that the will of the people must supersede the will of kings and despots.

In America we not only remember these things, but continue to strive valiantly for the ideals of democracy.

In Europe many nations are forgetting them—threatening as a result not only the peace of the world, but the well-being and preservation of their own people.

Despite the picture of turmoil and cruelty which such nations present, there are men who would have America accept some of their theories. There are men who would have us weaken our democracy in spiritless imitation of methods which have brought want and terror to millions abroad.

But America knows that the only real security lies in the freedom of spirit and of body which our democracy assures.

And Armistice Day reminds us of that spirit of the American citizen—sometimes the soldier, but always the guardian, of freedom.

Pliny Named Canaries

The Canary islands and the famous yellow songbirds, owe their name to the Roman scientist Pliny, who called the islands Canarias from the Latin word for dog because of the many "dogs of great size" found there.

Owls That Are Beneficial

The owls of the country that have once and for all been set aside as beneficial, according to a writer in the Detroit News, are the barn owl, the eastern screech owl, the snowy owl, the western burrowing owl, the northern barred owl, the great gray owl, the long-eared owl, the short-eared owl and the saw-whet owl. Only one has been adjudged by painstaking investigators as inordinately harmful, namely the great-horned owl. This owl is found in greatest numbers along the borders of the northern tier of states. They have a record for destroying vermin that is little less than amazing.

He's An Industrial Worker!

YOU would naturally think of the man operating the tractor as a farmer. And he is a farmer, but he's also an increasingly important figure in the industrial world, not only as a consumer but as a producer. He's engaged in hoeing up a field of soy beans which later, after passing through various factory processes, you'll be using in the form of paint and varnish, soap, linoleum and scores of other products. Consumers Information points out that 91 million pounds of soy bean oil, a comparatively new crop for American farmers, was produced in one recent year. Of this amount, 2 1/2 million pounds went into the soap kettles, 5 million into linoleum and 13 million into paint and varnish.

This brand new market for American farmers, who are now growing a large number of industrial as well as food products, has been developed, like many others, through the vast research programs undertaken by American industry, whose laboratories have added untold millions to the national wealth and whose thousands of jobs for American workers.

The WHITE STORE
"Joliet's Brightest Spot"
305 to 309 Cass Street
JOLIET, ILL.

THERE was not to be any Christmas tree at the little church at the head of Smoke Creek that year; and of the several families who lived there, not more than half were expecting Santa Claus. The dark days had left the dismal little valley or hollow even more gloomy than it had been in better years, when the mines across the ridge in the next hollow gave some employment to the heads of the families of Smoke Creek.

Jim Knox, who lived at the very head of the stream, was perhaps the most unhappy of all in the little "settlement." His wife and only child, a son of seven, had died, and his nearest neighbor was Joe Hathway, a bitter enemy with whom he had had many difficulties. So that lonely night of Christmas eve as Jim sat before the open wood fire, with the light of blazing hickory logs his only company, he was not without fear for his own safety—he knew Joe Hathway had threatened his life.

As he sat dreaming his eyes happened to rest upon his rifle standing in the corner of the log room. "That gun or Joe Hathway's will some day tell the tale," he said to himself. He meant that one day, like so many others down the lonesome stream, either he or Joe would go—and using a common mountain expression, "with his boots on." He did not care—life had come to mean but little for him.

While Jim was thus dreaming, Joe Hathway sat in another log cabin but a few yards down the stream. By chance Joe's attention was called to a book on a shelf. The school teacher had given it to his daughter who had died from the epidemic on the creek. The title appealed to him—"The Christmas Carol." He took the book and began to read. Page after page and chapter after chapter, he read on. It was the first book Joe had ever read. It filled him with new visions and new ways of thinking. He read on till midnight and had been so impressed that he decided to read a chapter from the Bible before going to bed. By mere accident the chapter was one on the birth at Bethlehem. Its teaching overpowered him—he had found the more abundant life.

On Christmas morning when Jim Knox went out to the spring for a pail of water he noticed something like a card tacked on Joe Hathway's door. He saw no smoke from the chimney. Taking in the water, cautiously he approached Joe's cabin door, and read the note which said:

"Dear Jim: You will find me gone. I was reading some last night in 'The Christmas Carol' and in the Bible. I read that verse that told of peace and good will to man. Said to myself, 'My family is all gone—the last was Mary. She left the book to get me on the right track. There's nothing in this hollow for me any more. Maybe I can find work by New Year's over on Cedar Creek. You and I never could get along. So to make things better for us both hereafter I am leaving at daybreak. And Jim as I say 'Good-bye,' I also wish to say, 'Peace on earth good will to men.'"

And as another result of "The Christmas Carol" two mountaineers were better men, and though they had no Christmas cards or presents, and no holiday programs, the pines on the hillsides seemed a bit greener and the music of the streams seemed sweeter.

Inflation and Deflation

There are many definitions of inflation, but one on which most experts agree is: "The placing in circulation of more money—in the form of either bank deposits or currency—at a rate faster than the increase in trade requirements." Deflation is the reverse of inflation. It means the contraction of the amount of currency and bank deposits outstanding at a rate faster than the decline in actual trade requirements for credit or money. In a period of deflation the banks liquidate their investments—that is, they call loans or do not renew them when they mature, and they sell investments.

GOOD PRINTING PAYS

Telling St. Nick

TOM MADSEN sat beside the fireplace and gazed moodily at the blazing logs, as the sparks spiraled upward. Outside flakes of snow beat against the window pane to the chime of the church bells ringing peace and good will to all the earth.

"Peace," Tom muttered. "Was there such a thing on earth? Not for him, anyway." He had staked everything on his boy. Been both father and mother to him—given him the advantage of the best schools, with a law partnership waiting for him in his own office; and what did he get? "Sorry to disappoint you, Dad, but I don't seem to be cut out for law. Sally and I want to find happiness in our own way. I mean to buy the old Wormley farm and Sally and I will be married there, in our own home, Dad, on Christmas eve."

Young Tom had choked a bit as he saw the look on his father's face. "I'm sorry, Dad; I do appreciate all you've done for me, but the hand writes and moves on, and it's all settled. Be a good sport, Dad, and come to our wedding and give us your blessing." But he had turned on his boy "Never!" he cried. "See my son married to a cheap dancer; a common"—Young Tom's face was white. "Stop, Dad, or I might forget you are my father"—and he had rushed out of the house.

That had been three long months ago. An eternity for him. He had been too hasty; had been governed by his prejudices. One couldn't measure the present generation by the one of his day. Tom, Jr., was no fool; he should have trusted him to do the right thing; what right had he to interfere; to say how any life should be lived?

Suddenly he wanted to have a share in the joyfulness. He reached for his hat, but remembered it was too late for shopping, but there was his check book. What if Tom refused his tardy offering? The eager look died. There was a loud ringing of the door bell and the sound of rushing feet—the door was flung open. There was Tom, looking just like he used to when he came to him for comfort. "Dad, we just have to have you. Sally sent me to bring you. It's Christmas," Tom, Sr., held out his arms. "We won't disappoint Sally, son."

The Witte Motor Sales

The Witte Motor Sales in Blue Island is a progressive dealer for the Chevrolet car, both new and used.
They are located at 12742 South Western Ave., phone 2370. They have a complete used car department. Here the wise buyer can find many trouble-free and satisfactory motor cars that are thoroughly reconditioned.Every used car they sell has their guarantee and their reputation behind it. The car is sold only if it is in good all around condition. Their guarantee has a real meaning and it is the final O. K. in the used car business. The Witte Motor Sales realize their duty to keep faith with the public and they have followedthis principle of square dealing ever since they have been in business.If you are in the market for a new car it is a thrill to own and drive a Chevrolet. The Chevrolet with all their added improvements still maintain their reputation as being the most economical to operate of any car on the market. It may be purchased for the same low prices that has made it the world's large-est seller. The Chevrolet without a doubt is the complete low priced car; "the car that has everything."In this Christmas edition we can not fail to compliment The Witte Motor Sales upon the part they are playing in the transportation life of the times and to say that the season holds a wonderful business for them.

St. Francis Hospital

There is nothing more important to the onward progress of our community than a hospital service such as offered by the St. Francis hospital. The very finest equipment, careful nursing, and the most able professional service are among the desirable features of this institution. They offer all types of general hospital service and are prepared to take care of the many emergencies which are constantly occurring.The management is to be commended upon devoting their life to the work which is so much needed to enable everyone to receive the utmost in comfort and medical care when ill or injured. The change in medical methods from olden timesis well exemplified in the work of this hospital, a change which typifies modern civilization.In addition to the mechanical improvements which has evolved through the progress of medical science one finds cheerfulness and an air of hope; that necessary basis for the art of medical care. This latter part of medical care has evolved in the most part through the painstaking care, the utmost patience, and the gentle kindness of the able and sufficient nursing staff.In our Christmas edition we wish to commend the St. Francis hospital located at 12948 South Gregory,

"Unto you is born this day in the city of David a Savior, which is Christ the Lord" (Luke 2:11)Christ was born as a little babe, that we might be born again, God's son. John 1:12God's way of sending the Savior into the world was a wonderful one.
His son came into the world as other children, except there was no sin in Him. His son grew and when man gave His life on the Cross as a punishment for the sins of the world.Jesus came in this humble way, so that all may know that He came to be their Savior. He came for rich

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES

"God the Preserver of Man" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, December 12.The Golden Text was, "The Lord shall deliver me, from every evil work, and will preserve me unto his heavenly kingdom: to whom be glory for ever and ever" (11 Timothy 4:18).Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "The Lord is good to all; and his tender mercies are over all his works. The eyes of all wait upon thee; and thou givest them their meat in due season. Thou openest thine hand, and satisfiest the desire of every living thing. The Lord preserveth all them that love him" (Psalms 145: 9, 15, 16, 20).The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science Textbook.
"Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy:
"God is not influenced by man. The "divine ear" is not an auditory nerve.
It is the all-hearing and all-knowing Mind, to whom each need of man is always known and by whom it will be supplied" (p. 7).

ILLINOIS
BREVITIES

Radio listeners are hearing with regularity the University of Illinois station, WILL, on its new frequency of 580 kilocycles. Its new dial location permits of easy reception in most parts of the state. The University of Illinois owns and operates the only non-commercial, publicly-owned broadcast station in the state. WILL is on the air daily from 7:30 a. m. to local sunset except Sunday. Its programs, interspersed, of course, with music, are devoted exclusively to educational and informational material in the form of lectures and discussions. These range all the way from present conditions in Europe and Asia, to economics, sociology, home economics and agriculture. Some highlights of programs throughout the week include:

7:45 a. m. daily—Talks by pastors of student churches.
8:01 a. m. M.W.F.—"Europe Since 1871"; Prof. A. H. Lybber.

Harriett E. Trevett, ninety-six, oldest pioneer resident of Champaign, died of pneumonia.

Mark W. Needler, forty-seven years old, a butcher, killed himself in his East Peoria shop. He left a note saying business was poor.

John Plummer, sixty-two years old, died an hour after he was shot by Kenneth Clegg, who said he found him in the Clegg chicken house in Urbana.

Two men with a revolver and a shotgun robbed the Farmers State Bank at Goodwine of $700 and kidnapped the bookkeeper. They released him six miles out of town.

A coroners jury at Benton returned a verdict of accident in the death of Francis Mooney, forty-two years old, who shot himself while hunting rabbits.

George Metzger, head of the Illinois Agricultural association, will be the speaker at the annual meeting of the Champaign County Farm bureau on the University of Illinois campus January 18.

Trustees of the Bethel Presbyterian church of Reno have leased five acres of church property for oil exploration with the provision that drilling will be suspended during church services.

Dr. William Joseph Carter, sixty-one years old, a fellow of the American College of Surgeons, died at his home in Mattoon of heart disease. He is survived by his widow and two sons.

John Lennon, sixty years old, postmaster in Plainfield, in Will county, since 1933, died in his home after a short illness. He had resided in Plainfield for 25 years. His widow, Grace, four sisters, and one brother survive.

A study by the University of Illinois Alumni association shows that one of every 75 persons in "Who's Who in America" is an alumnus or former student of the university. Among the 31,434 names in the publication, 415 are former Illini.

The Post Office department notified Representative Frank W. Fries of Carlinville it had appointed postmasters he recommended as follows: Mrs. Eva F. England at Nilwood, Muriel M. Schulthes at Piasa and George E. Lewis at Waggoner.

Four hundred Lake county farmers started a campaign of extermination against rats that have damaged feed and grain supplies in recent months. The work is supervised by the Lake County farm bureau, which obtained supplies of red squill, a rodent poison, from the United States Department of Agriculture.

Mrs. Marie Porter, mother of four children, and Angelo Giancola, whom she hired to slay her brother for his insurance, were sentenced to die in the electric chair on December 17. John Giancola was ordered to serve ninety-nine years in prison for his part in the crime.

John Cotton, father of Forrest Cotton, former Notre Dame football player, who is now athletic director of Catholic university, Washington, D. C., died at his home in Elgin. Mr. Cotton was born in England seventy-five years ago and came to Elgin as a boy.

BUSTER BEAR MAKES A REQUEST

BUSTER BEAR shook with laughter as he watched Reddy Fox disappear just like a little red streak. It had been great fun to give Reddy such a scare.

"I guess he won't come fooling around here again in a hurry," chuckled Buster.

"I guess he won't," chuckled Jumper the Hare. "I'm ever and ever so much obliged to you, Buster Bear. I—I'd like to do something for you to make up for it. Do you think I can do anything for you? I don't know how I can, because I'm so small and you are so big and strong. But I'd like to do something. I would, ever so much."

Buster scratched his head thoughtfully and there was a twinkle of fun in his shrewd little eyes as he looked down at Jumper. It struck him very funny that anyone so much smaller than he and so very, very timid really might be able to help him, but he was too shrewd to look down on anyone because they were smaller and weaker than he. He learned a long time ago not to despise anyone just because they are not big and strong. So he scratched his head and his eyes twinkled as he tried to think of some way in which Jumper the Hare could repay him for giving Reddy Fox such a fright. You see, it really had been a very great favor to Jumper, because Reddy Fox was hunting him. Now Reddy had had such a scare that he would not venture back there again very soon.

"You might let me know if you discover any danger for me in the Green Forest," said Buster thoughtfully.

Jumper looked at him as if he didn't know whether to think Buster was joking or not. Somehow Buster looked as if he meant it.

"I—I'll be very glad to," replied Jumper, "only I don't know what danger there can be for you. You are so big and strong and have such great teeth and claws that I—why, I don't see what there is for you to be afraid of, Buster!"

Buster looked as if he didn't know just what to say. No one ever likes to admit being afraid of anything. "Does—does a man ever visit the Green Forest?" asked Buster in a hesitating way.

"Farmer Brown's boy does sometimes, but nobody is much afraid of him any more," replied Jumper promptly. "He was very nice to Chatterer the Red Squirrel and to Mrs. Grouse and to Peter Rabbit this last winter, and everybody knows it. Besides, you are as big as he is and a whole lot stronger. Of course, you wouldn't be afraid of him, Buster!"

"N-o-o, no, of course not!" replied Buster. "Did you say he carries a dreadful gun?"

"He used to, but he doesn't very much now excepting when he hunts for Granny Fox or Reddy Fox," said Jumper.

"He might if he knew that I were here," replied Buster, "so I guess if you'll let me know when he is anywhere around I'll just keep out of sight. You know I wouldn't want to frighten him." Buster looked up at Sammy Jay and winked as he said this, and Sammy chuckled. "If you really want to do something for me," continued Buster, "you can try to find out for me where there is

MORE SHRIMP IS BEING CONSUMED

Improvement in Their Quality
Is Given as Reason.

By EDITH M. BARBER

ACCORDING to the seafood statistical bureau, the people of this country ate several million more shrimp during the last year than they did during the previous five years. The bureau gives as the reason for this, improvement in the quality which has resulted since the Department of Agriculture has provided an organization for the inspection of the sanitary methods of harvesting and canning this popular shellfish. You have probably noticed the improvement in flavor in the shrimp which you have purchased in canned form. There is an absence of that taste which I can only describe as "wooly" and which once was common.

Of course, another reason for the increase in the use of shrimp, although it is not mentioned by the statisticians, is the fact that shrimp are among the popular appetizers served with cocktails. There certainly have been millions of shrimps impaled on toothpicks for ducking in savory sauces. With slices of raw carrots and dill pickles, flowerets of raw cauliflower, sometimes supplemented by cucumber fingers or radishes, shrimps add contrast in texture and color when arranged around a bowl of sauce on a large glass plate. Dunking is popular in its new form.

There are many ways in which shrimps can be put to use by the business woman housekeeper in her never-ending search for a quickly prepared main dish for the quick meal. Creamed or scalloped with a Newberg sauce, made into croquettes or cutlets, or in the ever popular salad, shrimps do their bit quickly and well.

Shrimp Croquettes.

2 cans shrimp
1 tablespoon tomato paste
¼ cup boiled rice
2 hard-cooked eggs
2 tablespoons butter, melted
1 teaspoon salt
Cayenne pepper
¼ teaspoon mustard
½ cup top milk

Grind shrimps very fine. Mix with tomato paste, rice, finely chopped eggs, butter and seasonings with shrimps. Stir in milk. Mold into croquettes, dip in bread crumbs, egg and then crumbs again and fry in deep hot fat (390 degrees Fahrenheit) until golden brown. Drain on soft paper.

some honey. I want some honey. I'm almost starved for some honey." Buster put both paws on his stomach and looked so forlorn that Jumper had to laugh. "Don't laugh," said Buster. "Just think, I haven't had a taste of honey since last fall! If you hear of any anywhere, please hurry to let me know. Will you, Jumper?"

Jumper promised that he would, though how he was going to find out where there was any honey was more than he could guess. But he was willing to try, for he felt grateful to Buster Bear for frightening away Reddy Fox.

ness of the metal surface was filled with a cement intended for high temperatures; cement made of rock wool was used, although asbestos cement would have been just as effective. The boiler was then covered with an inch-and-a-half of good insulating material, a layer of cement was put on top and covered with heavy muslin. When the insulation had dried out, the job was finished with aluminum paint. Now, even when the fire is going full blast, the outside is only faintly warm to the touch. Fuel is being burned far more efficiently; a larger portion of the heat is passing to the upstairs rooms. Aside from the unheated attic, the cellar is now the coolest part of the house, which is as it should be.

Several kinds of insulation are available for such a job; magnesia blocks or rock wool blocks are especially effective.

As a general thing, it is best to have boiler insulation applied by a specialist. But I have seen a number of home talent jobs that were excellent. One in particular, began with the filling of all inequalities with so-called "high temperature" cement. High rib metal lath was then stretched around the boiler, with the ribs inward, to form a dead-air space. Pads of rock wool were bound against the lath with wires, and the surface covered with a layer of high temperature cement finished with muslin and aluminum paint.

The covering of a boiler with magnesia or rock wool blocks is by no means impossible for anyone handy with tools, but I believe that a professional job is worth while because it is more likely to be fully efficient.

cherry right at the start by pulling the contrivance up against the side of the glass. Then, if you have a plate or a cocktail napkin, put the toothpick down, and when you finish the cocktail pick up the toothpick again, spike your quarry and eat it without drippings.

If you aren't given a plate or a napkin you'll have to hold the toothpick in your left hand and wave it around, hoping that the hostess will walk by and get jabbed with it.

We seriously suggest to hostesses that they pass the toothpicks separately along with the canapés. It's nice to have your cherries and eat them, too—but most people are fond of their eyes and their best dresses as well.

Christmas at the Homestead

by Agnes Myers

"THE doorbell, Amanda! It may be the man with the hobby-horse," cried Natalie Parker, as she gathered up a confused heap of Christmas ribbons and gay colored wrappings strewn about the sitting room.

There was a sound of quick stamping and crunching of boots on the scraper. The old servant opened the front door and a man set an enormous package in the hall, said something about the blustering snowstorm and was gone.

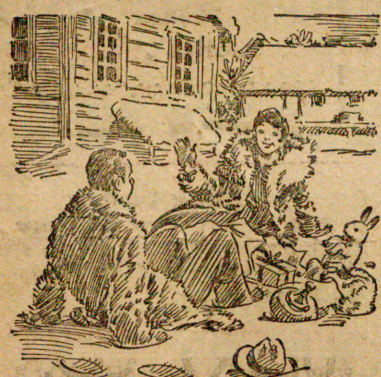

As the woman carried the package in to Natalie, a chirpy sound of funny little tinkling music issued from the bulky bundle. Her black eyes snapped with delight as she cut the heavy cords.

Out tumbled a hobbyhorse, a handsome fellow with a leather bridle; a white, woolly lamb with button eyes and a bell on his neck; a long-eared rabbit with a perky tail; and a queer little whimsical top that seemed to laugh with merry music every time it was moved. There was a wispy angora cap, just big enough for a baby, and a tiny white muff, oh, so little, of real fur with a tippet to match.

Amanda gasped! "All 'em Christmas gifts! No one cep'in you, Miss Naty, would ever think of such things! I jes hopes 'em Harlow chillun 'preciates the—the—" but her voice wavered. The sleeve of her alpaca frock brushed across her dimmed eyes as she picked up the crumpled brown wrappings and fled from the room.

Early next morning Natalie settled back in a train for a five-hour ride, her heart brimming with happiness.

Many changes had come over the young girl's life. Edith, her older

"Why, Natalie Parker!" Exclaimed the Dumbfounded Youth.

sister, married Arnold Harlow and lived in Hillsboro. Her house adjoined the lovely old rambling stone homestead where Benjamin Parker, a widower, lived with his daughter Natalie and the faithful Amanda. When Mr. Parker passed away Natalie closed the house and went to teach kindergarten in Boston. Amanda went with her.

The train dashed along through a whirling snowstorm. Deep in the tender mood of reminiscent reverie, Natalie fell asleep.

"Hillsboro!—Hillsboro!"

She awakened with a bound. Clutching her grip, a box of barley candy, and almost dragging the cumbersome and unwieldy pack, Natalie, still half asleep, stepped out at the very end of a long frosty platform.

A tall young man in a big fur coat was waving good-by to someone on the train as it pulled out. In his excitement he took a long, free stride backwards on the platform and crashed into Natalie.

The two went down in the drifted snow in a heap. The cord broke on the big bundle. Helter-skelter the multitude of Christmas gifts scattered in every direction.

They looked at each other in blank astonishment—then amazed recognition.

"Why, Natalie Parker!" gasped the dumbfounded youth.

"Bruce Draper!"—exclaimed the bewildered girl, actually spell-bound.

From somewhere in the snow came the sound of queer little rippling music. They looked at each other again with wide open eyes, then burst into rollicking laughter.

They gathered up the wayward toys and Bruce loaded them into his car. With the girl beside him, a triumphant smile played over his face, and they talked excitedly as the motor raced over the hills.

"Mother and Aunt Em just left for grandfather's farm and I'm going up tomorrow, but now tell me about yourself, Natalie."

"Bruce, surprises are so much fun. Edith doesn't know I'm coming."

Natalie got a real surprise, however, in a few moments, for no one was home at her sister's house. After repeated ringing and pounding, she looked at Bruce in dismay.

Her eyes wandered toward the Parker home.

"Oh, Bruce! I have the keys of the stone house! Let's go over and build a fire; we can at least keep warm until they come."

With logs from Harlow's woodpile Bruce soon had a roaring fire romping on the hearth. They stood before the flames, the girl's blond hair like an aureole of gold framing her face; the man, tall and bronzed, alert and capable.

Bruce Soon Had a Roaring Fire Romping on the Hearth.

Let's look through the house," suggested Natalie, leading the way.

At the turn on the stairs there was a wonderful beehive window on the landing, and a friendly window-seat. They lifted the lid. Many things were stored in the seat.

"What's this box? Candles!—Christmas candles!" called out Bruce. "Let's light up the windows!"

Back down stairs they dashed and soon the rambling stone house was a glitter of lights. Bruce went over to Harlow's to get some more logs, and returned with the wood and a package.

"Natalie, somebody delivered these holly wreaths at Edith's; I found them at the back door. We'll put them in the windows. Ho, ho!—What's this? Mistletoe, too!"

"Here's a footstool, Bruce; tack it on the hall arch."

With a flutter of ecstasy Natalie looked up smiling, but the firm face of Bruce Draper wore an expression of grave appeal. With a combination of strength and tenderness he took her in his arms.

"Dear Natalie, this mistletoe is a symbol of the plighting of love's troth." His voice trembled.

There was a moment of silence, a moment of mutual confidence and understanding which had been almost instantaneous. Her blond head rested in the hollow of his shoulder. Through the half-closed eyes warm tears gathered—his words clung to her senses like a benediction.

The heavy front door swung open suddenly. There stood Edith, Arnold, little Phillip and Peter—and tiny Marjorie, looking in wonder, as Natalie and Bruce awkwardly stammered and blushed in confusion.

"Well, well," chuckled Arnold, "we saw the lights—we thought—er—" and crossing the hall he gripped Bruce firmly with a friendly hand, while Edith kissed her happy-hearted sister.

"Look here, Bruce," said Arnold, "let's make this the reopening of the old homestead and send for Amanda."

Propaganda Goes Gruesome

THE World war not only made more people aware of the word "propaganda" than they had ever been before but the use of this instrument in "molding public opinion" reached greater heights—or descended to lower levels, whichever you wish to look at it—than ever before. One of the classic propaganda stories, broadcast all over the world, was that the Germans were using their dead to manufacture soap. This story was first circulated in China (where ancestor worship is strong) to win that country to the side of the Allies.

The story had its origin in a curious coincidence. One day two photographs were delivered to the office of Brig. Gen. J. V. Charters of the British Army Intelligence staff. One of them showed some dead German soldiers being hauled away to be buried. The other was a picture of dead horses on the way to a soap factory.

Whether or not what took place next was deliberate or accidental has never been definitely established. But the fact remains that the captions on the two pictures were switched and the one showing the dead German soldiers declared that they were "on their way to the soap factory."

Propagandists saw in this picture an opportunity for further exploiting the idea of "German ruthlessness," as well as evidence of the desperate condition of Germany and the picture was reprinted all over the world with that caption under it. Despite indignant denials by the Germans, many people still believe that they did indeed use their dead to manufacture soap during the World war.

Boomerang

WHEN Eugene Field joined the staff of the Chicago Daily News in August, 1883, and began writing his column "Sharps and Flats," he learned that it was the custom of the News to give each employee a turkey as a Christmas present. Thereupon he wrote a note to Melville E. Stone, the publisher (later famous as the head of the Associated Press) saying that he didn't like turkey but he could use a new suit of clothes.

The day before Christmas, when the other News workers were getting turkeys Field was handed a bundle. When he opened it, he discovered that it contained a convict's suit, resplendent in its black and white stripes. Field gravely thanked Stone for the present and the next day appeared at the office wearing the suit.

In fact, he wore it every day, much to Stone's distress. For whenever the editor happened to have distinguished callers in his office, Field was sure to walk in, attired in his convict's suit, even to the cap, and pretend to be busy attending to the coal stove in the office. Naturally, it caused the visitor to wonder why a "convict" should be working around the News office and it required considerable explaining on the part of the publisher.

It wasn't long until Stone was heartily sick of the joke he had played on his columnist. He tried to get Field to give up the suit but the humorist insisted that nothing could make him part with "Mr. Stone's gift." Finally in desperation, the publisher arranged with one of the News employees to steal the suit from Field's rooms and that ended Stone's joke which had proved to be such a boomerang.

The Lamplight Funeral

THE late Arthur Brisbane was once unintentionally responsible for circulating a story which turned out to be a hoax but which stirred the whole state of Georgia to the deepest indignation. It was the story of holding the funeral of a young girl in a Georgia cotton mill at night to permit her fellow workers to attend because the mill owners refused to allow its employees to leave during working hours.

The Atlanta Constitution immediately began an investigation and discovered (1) that, instead of a girl, it was a woman of twenty-five whose funeral had been held at night; (2) that she had never worked in the cotton mill; (3) that the funeral was held at night to meet a family exigency; (4) that many of the employees of the mill were present at the burial, which was held next day; and (5) that the man who had given Brisbane his "facts" had admitted being in error.

The famous columnist, however, refused to back down on his story and accused Clark Howell, editor of the Constitution, of trying to "cover up" bad working conditions in the textile industries of the South. Thereupon Howell produced signed statements from the minister who officiated at the funeral, the mayor of Covington, Ga., where it was held, the editor of the News, the local paper, and the president of the cotton mill to prove that the whole story was a hoax perpetrated by some one who wished to damage the textile industry.

Lesson for December 19

THE BIRTH OF JESUS

LESSON TEXT—Luke 2:8-20.
GOLDEN TEXT—For unto you is born this day in the city of David a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord.—Luke 2:11.
PRIMARY TOPIC—When Jesus Came.
JUNIOR TOPIC—When Jesus Came.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Birth of Our Saviour.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—God's Gift of a Saviour.

Few indeed are the stories that will bear retelling or the books that are worth re-reading. Rare is the song that we care to hear more than once. How significant then that we come to the observance of Christmas each year with hearts full of delight in the story of the birth of Jesus, eager again to hear the account from God's Word, and to listen with attentive souls for the sound of the angel's song in the Christmas music.

The birth of our Lord as the incarnate Saviour of men is still front page, headline news, even in 1937. The glad tidings of his coming still color the thinking and living of a world that has gone far from him, that lives today in hatred and enmity, even while outwardly recalling the coming of the One who was to bring peace on earth. We have even gone so far that men feel that the way to promote peace is to use the sword. Until the Prince of Peace himself shall reign there may be no other way. But let us be certain at this Christmas time that the tender baby hand from the cradle at Bethlehem has reached our hearts and lives, bringing us peace with God and good will toward men.

The first seven verses of our chapter relate the coming of Mary with Joseph to God's appointed place at his appointed time, for the entrance into this world of the Son of God as the "Word" that "was made flesh and dwelt among us" (John 1:14). Our lesson opens with the proclamation of the blessed good news to the shepherds in the field.

I. "Unto You Is Born . . . a Saviour" (vv. 8-14).

Christ was a great teacher, one whom the common people heard gladly, "for he taught them as one that had authority, and not as the scribes" (Mark 1:22). He was a leader among men, and lived a life which was an example beyond that of any man. But mark it well, this was not the central and essential purpose of his coming. He came as a Saviour. His mother was told before his birth that she should "call his name JESUS: for he shall save his people from their sins" (Matt. 1:21).

It is not enough to be among the countless thousands who superficially observe Christmas with greetings and gifts. We must with the shepherds go and present ourselves in personal devotion to him. If you have not met the Lord Jesus as your own personal Saviour do it now. And if you know him, make this a Christmas in which Christ is supreme.

II. "Let Us Now Go . . . and See" (vv. 15, 16).

Their fear changed to assurance by the words of the angel, the shepherds at once "go" and "see." Would that all those who heard today did likewise. The shepherds might well have found all manner of excuses for not going. They had sheep to care for, they were not prepared for a journey. No, the urge was upon them "and they came with haste . . . and found" Jesus.

III. "When They Had Seen . . . They Made Known" (vv. 17-20).

Mary the mother of Jesus had special reason to ponder these things in her heart. But the shepherds "returned, glorifying and praising God for all that they had heard and seen."

"Let the redeemed of the Lord say so" (Ps. 107:2). When we have found the Lord Jesus we must not simply rejoice in the satisfaction and peace that has come to our own souls. We are saved to serve. The normal expression of the new life in Christ is the proclamation of the gospel to the ends of the earth. Only in that spirit do we truly keep Christmas!

To every one that sees these lines—whether editor, typesetter, or proofreader—whether a reader in the midst of the clamor of the great city or in the quiet of a distant countryside, whether old or young, whether well or on a sickbed, whether alone, far from family and friends, or in the bosom of your family, the writer of these lines extends in the name of Christ a most hearty good wish for a blessed Christmas.

HOW to SEW By RUTH WYETH SPEARS

Making Over a Chair of the Ginger-Bread Era.

To modernize the old walnut chair at the right the pieces under the arms were removed and most of the carving covered up.

The padding at the back was removed entirely and replaced by a fiber board which was covered by a loose cotton filled cushion tufted like an old fashioned bed comfort except that the tied thread ends of the tufting were left on the wrong side.

This back cushion was fastened in place with tapes that slipped over the knobs at the ends of the upper carving. If the knobs to hold the cushion had been lacking it could have been tacked in place along the top on the under side by using a strip of heavy cardboard to keep the tacks from pulling through the fabric as shown here for tacking the box pleated ruffle around the seat as at A. A plain rust colored heavy cotton upholstery material was used for the covering.

Every Homemaker should have a copy of Mrs. Spears' new book, SEWING. Forty-eight pages of step-by-step directions for making slipcovers and dressing tables; restoring and upholstering chairs, couches; making curtains for every type of room and purpose. Making lampshades, rugs, ottomans and other useful articles for the home. Readers wishing a copy should send name and address, enclosing 25 cents, to Mrs. Spears, 210 South Desplains St., Chicago, Illinois.

"Better Be Safe Than Sorry"

Farmers Can Save Nitrate In Soil

Two weeks ago we discussed in this column how farmers could save soil nitrates that were present or had been concentrated in the surface soil and which were subject to loss by leaching should heavy rains occur with the absence of a frost crust. This is done by using a method of converting such nitrates into soil humus through the action of certain forms of soil bacteria. To do this we supply these bacteria with carbon in the form of cellulose. This cellulose not only serves as a source of food and energy for the bacteria but also provides the carbon that in chemical union with the nitrogen of the soil nitrates and phosphorous forms the black humus coating that bacteria apply around soil particles.

Cellulose is the principal constituent of the small grain straws and the upper portions of cornstalks, including husks, leaves and leaf sheaths. The pithy portion of the cornstalks, consists largely of lignin (wood fiber). We usually have soil nitrates not being used by our annual crops following the close of the vegetative period which occurs after blossoming and completion of pollination. From then on feeding roots are themselves being absorbed and moved to the grain and consequently made soluble by the different groups of saprophytic bacteria (the types that decay organic matter) unless utilized by growing weeds is subject to leaching should heavy rainfall occur.

Therefore, not only are we highly interested in how to save and carry forward this plant food but we are also interested in the great benefits that follow the increase of the humus coating on soil particles. Some of these benefits, in addition to the extra plant food, are an increase in water holding capacity, quicker warming of the soil and releasing of plant food in the spring, increased friability which means not only wider opportunity of plowing but less power required to plow and decreased cost of plowing and cultivation, and easier plant root penetration with corresponding much faster root growth.

All of us appreciate the difference between black soils and non-humus coated clay soils. We pointed out the ratio or proportion of carbon to nitrogen as required by bacteria to make humus, being roughly twelve to one of nitrogen, and that we could also assume that one-fifth of the weight of cellulose, or straw as we know it, was carbon. To get an idea of the proportionate amount of nitrates that a ton of straw or cornstalk cellulose will fix in the soil as humus, let us consider the nitrates remaining in the tops of sweet clover plants the fall of the first year, say in November, after nitrogen translocation to the roots for the following spring's growth has been completed. When frost ruptures the cell structure of these tops this nitrogen carried in cell sap leaches out and in the absence of straw or cellulose is lost. At any rate, we do not find a corresponding increase in the soil nitrogen after frost destroys these tops. Roughly one and one-half tons of straw per acre will fix this residual nitrogen of the sweet clover tops after freezing.

The first step of this process is the development of fungi (molds) and the bodies and substance of the fungi are in turn consumed by bacteria; thus making possible a fixation of this otherwise lost nitrogen in the soil. Two weeks ago we pointed out that the cellulose portions of cornstalks afforded a good opportunity of providing for salvaging unconsumed nitrates of the soil that follow close of the vegetative period of the corn and that to accomplish this the cellulose tissue or structure of the stalks would have to be distributed in the soil root zone which was done by chopping or mincing with a disk so that the cellulose portion could be thoroughly distributed in the soil. Those passing along the Lincoln Highway in Frankfort Township would have noticed the disking of the stalk growth of the Thomson Hybrid Seed Fields which had previously indicated a considerable nitrate accumulation.

The question would then be asked that if we did not have the opportunity of accomplishing this cellulose distribution in the fall, would it not be as well to wait until spring and then bring about its distribution in the soil. The soil situation in spring, however, is quite the reverse of that of the fall and we must keep in mind that in the spring we want the nitrogen or growing crops and usually do not want cellulose decomposing fungi or bacteria to compete with growing crops for this nitrogen. We can all recall that adding straw manure to the soil in spring often decreased crop yields simply because the soil micro-organisms breaking down this straw competed with the growing crop for nitrogen. There are some winters, however, during which we do not have leaching action of the nitrates and may carry sufficient forward into the spring so that if the remaining cellulose residues are quickly disking in there may be not only time enough to complete their decomposition before growing crops require all the nitrogen but the greater amount of nitrogen may possibly supply enough for both purposes.

Here again we see that there is no rule that we can go by but must, on the other hand, understand these soil processes so that we can decide according to the conditions as they may occur whether or not we can as advantageously add cellulose to the soils in the spring. As a rule, however, residues of the previous crop have to quite a degree been broken down through the winter so that the remainders are much reduced. Further, part of the products of this winter decomposition have gone into the soil and portions may either have been washed or been blown away. Hence, crop residues that remain in the spring can be incorporated into the soil but their soil benefit will usually not be equal to what it might have been if this same cellulose inclusion had been accomplished in the fall when the soil accumulated nitrates would have been used.

Soil and crop tillage may not keep us busy in winter but we can apply ourselves with both pleasure and profit to soil understanding.

Auto License Plates for 1938

The mailing of automobile license plates for 1938 will begin on Dec. 15 it was announced today by the office of Secretary of State Edward J. Hughes. The usual volume of early business requires much preliminary clerical work before the plates may be issued and as a consequence some delay is necessary. Over the counter service also will begin on Dec. 15.

Secretary Hughes stated that motorists who have requested high numbers must of necessity receive their plates at a later date than those whose numbers occur in the regular run as the plates are made in rotation by the manufacturer and the mailing is done in accord with the run.

An important point was emphasized by Secretary Hughes with regard to new car buyers. Any car purchased on or after Dec. 6 does not require a 1937 license. All new car buyers of this date forward need not hesitate to send in their applications for 1938 plates in the fear they will be assessed for 1937 also. Any application received at the present date from such car owners will be for 1938 only.
